Los Angeles Times: Weight-Loss Surgery Is Associated With A Reduced Risk Of Melanoma, Researchers Say

In addition to rapid and lasting weight loss and a passel of other health benefits, bariatric surgery has now been linked to a 61% reduction in the risk of developing malignant melanoma, a deadly form of skin cancer most closely associated with excessive sun exposure. The new research, to be presented Thursday at the European Congress on Obesity in Vienna, Austria, also found that people who underwent weight-loss surgery saw their risk of skin cancer in general decline by 42%. (Healy, 5/23)

Los Angeles Times: Obesity May Make Women More Vulnerable To A Host Of Cancers, Especially If They Gain Weight Quickly

Compared to women of normal weight, those with obesity are 24% more likely to develop one of a handful of cancers linked to the condition, and their chances of developing cancers of the kidney or endometrium were around twice as high as those of normal-weight women, new research has found. In a Norwegian study that tracked 137,205 women between 30 and 70 years old, researchers also found that those who gained more than 22 pounds over a period of five to eight years were nearly twice as likely as those who maintained a stable weight to develop pancreatic cancer. (Healy, 5/23)

18. To Help Smokers Kick The Habit, Money Outperforms E-Cigs, Nicotine Patches

But quitting rates overall were woefully low. Out of 6,006 smokers who enrolled in the trial, only 80 could provide biochemical evidence that they were smoke-free six months after their quit dates.

Los Angeles Times: To Get Smokers To Quit, Money Works Better Than Electronic Cigarettes

When it comes to helping smokers quit, financial rewards are much more effective than electronic cigarettes. But the sad truth is that nothing works all that well, according to the results of a large clinical trial that tested five smoking-cessation strategies in real-world conditions. Out of 6,006 smokers who enrolled in the trial, only 80 could provide biochemical evidence that they were smoke-free six months after their quit dates. That's a success rate of just 1.3%. (Kaplan, 5/23)

The Associated Press: E-Cigarettes Disappoint In A Workplace Quit-Smoking Study
In a large study of company wellness programs, free electronic cigarettes did not help smokers quit more than usual methods such as nicotine patches. The only thing that really worked was offering them money to kick the habit. E-cigarettes are battery-powered devices that vaporize nicotine. It's not known whether they can help smokers quit. ## 19. Research On Children 'Growing Out' Of Gender Dysphoria Adds Layer Of Complexity To Transgender Care

Although research shows that up to 94 percent of children will "grow out" of their transgender identity, advocates say that those studies were flawed in the first place and shouldn't dictate how doctors care for young children who want to socially transition.

KQED: The Controversial Research On 'Desistance' In Transgender Youth
The phenomenon of transgender children "growing out of" their transgender identity by the time they are adolescents or adults is called "desistance" by gender researchers. For decades, follow-up studies of transgender kids have shown that a substantial majority -- anywhere from 65 to 94 percent -- eventually ceased to identify as transgender. (Brooks, 5/23)

KQED: Are 3-Year-Olds Too Young To Change Genders? Transgender Researchers Disagree
Gender clinicians who recommend social transition at such an early age call their model "gender affirmative," and they believe their approach is now ascendant. Historically, clinicians more commonly treated transgender kids by discouraging cross-gender identity. (Brooks, 5/23)

A group of 127 House Democrats is calling on White House Office of Management and Budget (OMB) Director Mick Mulvaney to reject a proposal that would roll back ObamaCare's anti-discrimination protections for transgender patients. The proposed rule from the Department of Health and Human Services (HHS), currently being reviewed by OMB, is expected to be released later this summer. (Weixel, 5/23)

20. State Highlights: Court Upholds Ruling Against California Aid-In-Dying Law; Oregon Fights High Hep C Mortality Rate With New Treatment Model

Media outlets report on news from California, Oregon, Massachusetts, Texas, Rhode Island, Florida, Louisiana, Missouri, Maryland, Minnesota and Arizona.

The Associated Press: No Stay Of Ruling That Tossed California Assisted-Death Law
An appeals court on Wednesday refused to block a court decision that said a California law allowing the terminally ill to end their lives was passed illegally. California's 4th District Court of Appeal refused to grant an immediate stay requested by state Attorney General Xavier Becerra. However, the court gave Becerra and other parties time to "show cause" — that is, provide more arguments as to why the court should grant the stay and suspend the lower court ruling. There was no immediate comment from Becerra's office. (5/23)

PBS NewsHour: With Highest Hepatitis C Mortality Rate In U.S., Oregon Expands Access To Life-Saving Drugs

New drugs can cure up to 95 percent of patients with hepatitis C, a virus that can be debilitating or deadly. And there's been a 20 percent rise in new infections from 2015 to 2016 due to the opioid epidemic. In Oregon, a state hard-hit by the disease, new medicines combined with the big surge in those looking for treatment has led to a unique care model. (Wise, 5/23)

Boston Globe: If Regulators OK The Deal, The State's New Health Care Giant Will Be Called Beth Israel Lahey Health

After months of discussion and market research, the hospitals planning to merge and create a large new Massachusetts health system have settled on a company name: Beth Israel Lahey Health. Beth Israel Deaconess Medical Center of Boston and Lahey Health system of Burlington are leading the merger, which is still under review by state and federal regulators. (Dayal McCluskey, 5/23)

Houston Chronicle: New Website Shows Cost Of Common Medical Procedures In Houston

How much does a brain scan cost in Houston? Texans can now find out with ease thanks to a recently launched website by the Texas Department of Insurance. The new site, Texashealthcarecosts.org, shows users the average cost of most common medical procedures. The site also lets users compare network, and out-of-network, claims data and see the average cost of care in different regions of Texas. (Ramirez, 5/23)

The Associated Press: Nurse Who Sued Hospital For Retaliation Awarded $28 Million
A jury has ruled that a Boston hospital retaliated against a Haitian-American nurse who stood up for a black colleague and has awarded her $28 million. The Boston Globe reports that Toussaint also had accused the hospital of racial discrimination, but the jury didn't find proof of that claim. (5/23)

California Healthline: Sutter Health Strikes Back At California Attorney General's Antitrust Suit

In a high-stakes legal battle over medical market power, Sutter Health has accused California Attorney General Xavier Becerra of overstepping his powers and acting like a "health-care policy czar." Becerra filed an antitrust lawsuit against the large Sacramento-based health system in March. The complaint accuses Sutter of illegally quashing competition and for years overcharging consumers and employers. The case has attracted widespread attention amid growing concerns nationally about consolidation among hospitals, insurers and other industry players. (5/23)

Boston Globe: Partners HealthCare, R.I. Hospital System Finalize Merger Deal
After more than a year of sometimes tenuous discussions, Partners HealthCare announced Wednesday that it had finalized a deal to acquire Rhode Island's second-largest hospital system. ...While the deal must be reviewed by federal regulators and officials in Massachusetts and Rhode Island, the announcement marked a key step toward Boston-based Partners' goal of expanding its reach out of state. Florida women are seeing positive advances in health care, including declining mortality rates for heart disease, breast cancer, and AIDS. However, suicide attempts are increasing. Orlando Sentinel: Florida Hospital Performs First Pediatric Liver Transplant In Orlando
Central Florida's first pediatric liver transplant has been successfully performed on a 16-year-old boy by a team of surgeons from Florida Hospital and Children's Hospital of Pittsburgh of UPMC, the health systems announced on Wednesday. The teen, who didn't reveal his identity to protect his privacy, was released from the hospital this week. (Miller, 5/23)

New Orleans Times-Picayune: University Medical Center Worries About Funding, But Won't Send Layoff Notices

The University Medical Center in New Orleans is holding off on sending out layoff

notices, though the hospital's funding after June 30 is completely up in the air at this point, officials said Wednesday (May 23). Gov. John Bel Edwards vetoed a budget proposal the Louisiana Legislature approved last week that included money to operate University Medical Center and a handful of other hospitals around the state that serve the poor and uninsured. Dallas Morning News: 3 Clinics To Close As Several North Texas Pediatric Facilities Get New Owner

MD Medical Group, a Las Colinas-based company that runs primary care clinics largely in D-FW, is acquiring 13 pediatric clinics from Children's Health Texas. Three additional Children's Health clinics will close, though one may be reborn as a telemedicine clinic. The deal significantly reduces the ownership stake of Children's Health within the business of pediatric primary care. Children's Health is the nation's eighth-largest pediatric health care provider. San Jose Mercury News: New California Laws Could Help Ex-Prisoners Get Better Paying Jobs

A package of bills making its way through the California legislature could change the career outlook for people like [Amika] Mota, who have gone through job training programs in prison but been denied access to higher paying jobs because their records prevent them from getting licensed. The bills would prohibit many state licensing boards — including those that oversee barbers, building contractors, paramedics and social workers — from using arrest or conviction records as the sole basis to deny professional licenses to applicants with nonviolent criminal arrests or convictions. (Sciacca, 5/23)

St. Louis Public Radio: Study: Heart Failure Patients In Missouri's Larger Cities Leave Hospitals With More Health Problems

Patients with heart failure who are discharged from the hospital are more likely to have other health problems and complications if they live in Missouri's largest cities, according to a study by the health research company Dexur. Complications are usually seen as a way to gauge a population's overall well-being. (Fentem, 5/23)

California Healthline: 'Time's Up': Covered California To Enforce Quality And Safety Targets

Covered California, the state's health insurance marketplace under the Affordable Care Act, has devised what could be a powerful new way to hold hospitals accountable for the quality of their care. Starting in less than two years, if the hospitals haven't met targets for safety and quality, they'll risk being excluded from the "in-network" designation of health plans sold on the state's insurance exchange. Pioneer Press: The Gathering Hospice In Oak Park Heights Closes Due To A Licensing Issue

The hospice at Boutwells Landing senior housing complex in Oak Park Heights closed Monday due to a compliance issue. Minnesota Department of Health officials recently identified that the hospice, called The Gathering, did not have the correct license to be a residential hospice, said Scott Smith, a spokesman for the department. The Gathering had a housing-with-services license, which covers assisted-living and home care patients. (Divine, 5/23)

Arizona Republic: Medical Marijuana Legal On Arizona College Campuses, Court Rules

The Arizona Supreme Court ruled Wednesday that the state can't criminally charge public college students for having and using marijuana on campus if they have a medical marijuana card. The high court said a 2012 law banning medical marijuana on college campuses violated the Arizona Constitution's protections for voter-approved laws. (Leingang, 5/23)

21. Longer Looks: A Pioneering Heart Surgeon; Psychedelic Drugs; Tech Addiction

Each week, KHN finds interesting reads from around the Web.

ProPublica: A Pioneering Heart Surgeon's Secret History Of Research

There's a story Bud Frazier tells often. It was around 1966, and Frazier, now one of the world's most celebrated heart surgeons, was a medical student at Baylor College of Medicine. An Italian teenager had come to Houston for an aortic valve replacement, but at some point during or after the surgery, the teen's heart stopped. Doctors told Frazier to reach in and start pumping the failed organ by hand. As he did so, the teen lifted a hand to Frazier's face, and in that moment, just before the patient died, he says he realized his life's calling. (Ornstein and Hixenbaugh, 5/24)

Vox: Why Psychedelic Drugs Could Transform How We Treat Depression And Mental Illness

The first time I tried ayahuasca, a plant concoction containing the natural hallucinogen DMT, I remember thinking: "Just let go. Whatever happens, just let go." Eventually, I did let go, and what followed was the most rewarding, and harrowing, experience of my life. I was forced to confront my own ego in a way I never had before, and I wasn't quite prepared for what I saw. (Illing, 5/21)

Wired: Congress Is About To Learn Just How Little Science Knows About Tech Addiction

questions Facebook CEO Mark Zuckerberg faced before members of Congress last month, you'd be forgiven for thinking some legislators had never so much as heard of the internet. (Pardon the snark, but South Carolina senator Lindsey Graham's "Is Twitter the same as what you do?" still gives us the vapors.) And yet, recent signs suggest America's lawmakers aren't completely clueless about the growing concern over tech giants and their influence. (Gonzalez, 5/23)

The Atlantic: Can Genetic Counselors Keep Up With 23andMe?

In hindsight, clicking on the email from 23andMe at 10 p.m., alone, on a particularly cold March night probably wasn't the best idea. Still, Nancy Wurtzel thought she was prepared for the genetic-testing company to give her the news that she had inherited the gene for late-onset Alzheimer's disease. Both her parents died from it—her father at 86 and her mother at 92. But when Wurtzel stared at the blue glow of her computer screen announcing she had two copies of the ApoE4 variant and quoting her a 60-percent chance of developing Alzheimer's by age 85, she panicked. "I could hardly catch my breath, and I felt like the floor was opening up. The reality hit me," says Wurtzel, a 62-year-old public-relations consultant from Minneapolis. "I thought, 'What do I do now?'" (Richards, 5/22)

The New York Times: Trying To Put A Value On The Doctor-Patient Relationship

On October 2014, my father was startled to receive a letter announcing the retirement, in a month's time, of our family physician. Both he and his doctor were in their late 60s by then, and their relationship went back about 30 years, to the early 1980s, after my father followed his father and paternal grandparents, all from the Midwest, to Southwest Florida. How they began seeing the doctor is beyond memory, but as my father's grandparents grew increasingly frail, his father frequently drove them to their doctor for checkups. At one of them, in the mid-'80s, the doctor suggested that it might be less strenuous for my great-grandparents if he met them in the parking lot. From then until they died, he came downstairs from his seventh-floor office with his black bag and climbed into the back seat of their yellow Oldsmobile 88 to give them their physicals. (Tingley, 5/16)

The New York Times: The Opioid That Made A Fortune For Its Maker — And For Its Prescribers

Selling drugs is a relationship business. It's best to do it in person. That is why, on a summer evening in 2012, Alec Burlakoff was out for dinner with Steven Chun, the owner of Sarasota Pain Associates. Burlakoff was a sales manager for Insys Therapeutics, an Arizona-based pharmaceutical company with only one branded product, a new and highly potent opioid painkiller called Subsys. Chun was a doctor who prescribed a lot of opioids. (Evan Hughes, 5/2)

EDITORIALS AND OPINIONS

22. Viewpoints: Trump's Fearless Pro-Life Promises Leap Ahead Of Past Presidents; Ignore Platitudes About Work Requirements

Editorial pages focus on these and other health care issues.

The Washington Post: Trump Is Proving To Be The Most Fearlessly Pro-Life President In History

President Trump's critics were apoplectic last week when the president referred to MS-13 gang members as "animals." Of course, no one should be dehumanized. Yet many of the same people expressing outrage that Trump would dehumanize vicious gang members have no problem dehumanizing innocent, unborn children. Trump has stood up for the humanity of the unborn child like no president in recent memory. And this is why so many Christian conservatives stick with him. (Marc A. Thiessen, 5/23)

The New York Times: The Supreme Court's Next Abortion Chapter

If it seems as if the noose is tightening around women's access to abortion, that's because it is. Iowa just enacted a flagrantly unconstitutional law to ban abortion after a fetal heartbeat is detected — at about six weeks of pregnancy, before many women even know they're pregnant. Mississippi recently banned abortion at 15 weeks, a point well before fetal viability and thus also clearly unconstitutional. A similar bill in Louisiana cleared the legislature and is on the governor's desk. (Linda Greenhouse, 5/24)

The New York Times: The Not-So-Subtle Racism Of Trump-Era 'Welfare Reform'

When President Trump signed an executive order this year directing federal agencies to review adding work requirements to federal assistance programs, he said such requirements would "increase self-sufficiency, well-being and economic mobility." Paul

Ryan reportedly cast requirements as an attempt at “getting people the skills and opportunity to get into the work force.” Seema Verma, head of the Centers for Medicare and Medicaid Services, said they would improve “health and well-being through incentivizing work and community engagement.” Ignore the platitudes. Work requirements have never been about helping the poor or unemployed. They’ve always been about punishing black people. (Bryce Covert, 5/23)

The Hill: 'Right To Try' Is An Ill-Considered Bill

Food and Drug Administration Commissioner Scott Gottlieb is often given credit for straying from the Trump administration script by being public health and evidence-focused. But there’s one respect in which he, at times, takes his cues from the top — making policy by tweeting. Take the controversy over “right to try” bills, which have sought to cut Food and Drug Administration (FDA) out of the process through which severely ill patients obtain access to drugs in development that have not been approved by FDA. That debate reached a climax on Tuesday when the House passed such a bill. (Peter Lurie, 5/23)

WBUR: Do High-Deductible Plans Make Even Cancer Care A Luxury Item?

If high-deductible plans continue to gain traction in the marketplace, we will all pay the price. There is no doubt that these plans can be a source of poor medical decisions when more people are forced to make hard decisions about whether some care is worth it. (Rosemarie Day, 5/23)

The Hill: Trump And Azar Are Rightly Moving Health Care Back To Free-Market Policy
Earlier this month, President Trump and Health and Human Services Secretary Alex Azar unveiled the administration’s American Patients First plan to lower costs and increase access to medicines. Importantly, this blueprint rejects the misguided approach of moving toward a socialized system of health care, which would inevitably lead to the rationing of medicines and services. Instead, Trump recognizes the underlying problems that are leading to higher prices and reducing access. (Alex Hendrie, 5/23)

The Hill: The Problem Isn't Opioids — It's How We're Raising Our Kids

Let’s start with the obvious. Our nation is suffering from the scourge of an opioid epidemic—in the form of addiction to opioid-based painkillers and heroin — that is creating anxiety, fear, and hopelessness among families and communities, while representing the leading cause of natural death in our country. Now, let’s discuss what is less obvious. Although 1 in 4 individuals with chronic pain who are prescribed an opioid by their family health-care provider will develop an addiction, the path of substance use disorders (SUDs) typically begins at an earlier point in their lives — in adolescence. Ninety percent of adults currently suffering from an SUD started using substances as children and teenagers. (Melissa Tasse, 5/23)

USA Today: Opioid Crisis Response Is Being Led By Republicans

Our nation is in the midst of the deadliest drug crisis in history — a crisis fueled by opioids. More than 630,000 Americans have died from drug overdoses since the turn of the century. That means almost as many people have died from drugs in less than two decades as those who died in the Civil War. More than half of the deaths in 2016 involved opioids. This death toll is staggering, but the consequences of drugs are not limited just to the more than two million Americans who are addicted to them. (Rep. Kevin McCarthy, 5/23)

Stat: Why Was Theranos So Believable? Medicine Needs To Look In The Mirror

I watched the recent “60 Minutes” report on the rise and fall of Theranos, the test-everything-with-a-fingerstick company that recently flamed out, costing numerous high-profile investors north of $700 million. The report laid out the standard narrative about Theranos, including healthy doses of deception and greed, an absence of various sorts of oversight, and too much Silicon Valley mythology. To get some perspective on what happened, I looked back at what was said about the company just a few years ago. I re-read a December 2014 article in the New Yorker on Theranos and its founder, Elizabeth Holmes. What struck me as I compared the “60 Minutes” and New Yorker pieces, which were separated by only a little more than three years, is one simple question that seems to have been missed in the ashes: Why was the Theranos pitch so believable in the first place? (Michael J. Joyner, 5/24)

Stat: A Focus On Cost Instead Of Value Threatens Future Of Personalized Medicine

One size fits all never worked as a strategy for the fashion industry. Or the auto, furniture, and most other industries. It shouldn't be the strategy for medicine either, but unfortunately more often than not it is. And it may stay that way if the focus on cost rather than value precludes the improved health care strategies made possible by personalized medicine. According to the World Health Organization, an effective health system requires “reliable information on which to base decisions and policies.” The evolving field of personalized medicine delivers just that kind of information in the form of data about the unique biological characteristics of each patient. Doctors can often use that information to make medical decisions based on an understanding of how a patient will respond at a molecular level to a specific therapy. This helps ensure that therapies are prescribed only to those who will benefit from them, sparing side effects and expenses to those who will not. (Edward Abrahams, 5/23)

Boston Globe: America's Plummeting Birthrate Is An Alarm We Shouldn't Ignore
From the National Center for Health Statistics came some disturbing news last week:

The US birthrate, which has been on the skids for a decade, hit another record low. ...When nations retreat from marriage and children, their outlook tends to become bleaker and less prosperous. (Jeff Jacoby, 5/23)

Sacramento Bee: California Youths Need Alternatives To Incarceration
Arresting and incarcerating youth does nothing to get to the root of their behavior and can have consequences that last a lifetime. It is time for a new approach, grounded in community-based support and healing. (Jessica Nowlan, 5/23)

23. Perspectives: Parents Shouldn't Leave The Gun Protests Just To The Students

Writers offer thoughts on the public health issue.

Chicago Tribune: School Boycotts? Yes, Parents Must Pressure Congress To Pass Smart Gun Laws

In the wake of another mass shooting at a public school, a colleague and I floated the idea of a parent boycott of schools to drive action by Congress. The idea is gaining traction — parents across the country understand that a national crisis deserves a national response. And our voices, and votes, are the most powerful tools we possess. The concept is straightforward. School parents are a massive voting block — maybe 100 million strong — and live in every Congressional district in the country. After the Labor Day holiday in September, if they kept their kids out of school for a day or a week or even two weeks, maybe Congress would do something about gun safety. (Arne Duncan, 5/23)

Sun Sentinel: Dreams Of Gun Control And The Reality Of Civilian Gunshot Wounds
I am a neurosurgeon who has treated many patients with gunshot wounds to the brain. Most died. Indeed, about 97 percent of such victims die. Medical professionals treating them are profoundly frustrated because their efforts are usually fruitless and they must inform victims' families of the situation and try to support them. They also frequently need to explain brain death and introduce the subject of organ donation. (Howard H. Kaufman, 5/23)

Miami Herald: Health Officials Can Attack Gun-Violence Epidemic The Way They Attacked HIV/AIDS

With the dust settling after the familiar uproar immediately following another mass shooting, let's assess where these tragedies, and subsequent discussions, leave the gun debate in America. The daily threat of gun violence is unique in our society. As the violence pervades our public spaces, the need for a public-health approach is often pondered, but rarely discussed carefully — and even when it does receive deeper discussion, it's never fully explicit as to what this approach might mean for an epidemic already framed within a criminal justice and mental-health paradigm. (Roderick King and Katelyn McGlynn, 5/23)

Your voice matters.

As a nuclear energy advocate, you have the power to affect real change in the industry.

We know that closing nuclear plants has devastating impacts to the communities they serve – and the entire country. If we're going to stop the attack on clean energy sources in Ohio and Pennsylvania, we need to make our voices heard. The first step is showing our elected officials that this is a real issue affecting real people.

Email us at info@nuclearmatters.com to submit a photo of you and your family along with your story about what nuclear means to you.

Transportation & Public Safety

HB 16 ■ ROAD NAMING (Cera, J.) To designate a portion of State Route 43 in Jefferson County as the "Army Corporal Carl H. Bernhart Memorial Highway."
(REPORTED (No testimony); 2nd Hearing-All testimony-Possible vote)

HB 22 ■ ROAD NAMING (Hambley, S.) To designate a portion of State Route 261 in Medina and Summit Counties as the "Sergeant James F. Allen III Memorial Highway."
(REPORTED; 2nd Hearing-All testimony-Possible vote)

Asley Rae Yeager submitted written testimony in support. "The significance of having a memorial highway designated in his name would mean so much to me personally, his daughter Natalie, son Tristan, as well as friends, family, and military comrades," she wrote.

"It will also stand as a daily encouragement to continue his legacy through goodwill and advocacy."

HB 9 TRAFFIC SIGNALS (Koehler, K.) To specify that the alternative protocol for proceeding into an intersection with malfunctioning traffic lights due to a failure of a vehicle detector applies only to bicycles. (REPORTED; 2nd Hearing-All testimony-Possible vote)

Sgt. Nick Konves, of the Columbus Police Bicycle Coordination Unit, testified in support, saying he became aware of the bill that passed last session (HB154, 131st General Assembly) after seeing news reports and was concerned that any type of vehicle could treat red lights as stop signs in certain instances. He cited "blind intersections," differences between stop signs and traffic signals at intersections and the potential for crashes at the crossroads.

He said the prior legislation, which allows vehicles to proceed through malfunctioning traffic signals, allows for too much discretion. "This makes enforcement and prosecution very difficult and nearly impossible," he said. "I have testified many times in various court systems during my career and I foresee this causing a big problem for prosecution."

Responding to a question from Rep. Michael Sheehy (D-Oregon), the witness said that under the bill a bicycle could still proceed through an untriggered traffic signal after a "reasonable amount of time."

Patricia Kovacs, of the Ohio Bicycle Federation, said the bill passed last session should stand and allow for all motor vehicles to proceed through malfunctioning traffic signals. At minimum, motorcycles should also be included because they face the same issues as bicycles, she said.

"This law should really apply to any vehicle," she said.

Subscribers Note: Full testimony is available on the committee's website under Feb. 15. Civil Justice

HB 1 DATING PROTECTION ORDERS (Sykes, E., Manning, N.) To authorize the issuance of dating violence protection orders with respect to conduct directed at a petitioner alleging dating violence, to provide access to domestic violence shelters for victims of dating violence, and to require the Attorney General's victim's bill of rights pamphlet to include a notice that a petitioner alleging dating violence has the right to petition for a civil protection order. (CONTINUED (See separate story); 1st Hearing-Sponsor & proponent)

HB 7 MEDICAL PROVIDER IMMUNITY (Cupp, R.) To grant qualified civil immunity to certain medical providers who provide emergency medical services as a result of a disaster; to provide that certain communications made regarding an unanticipated outcome of medical care, the development or implementation of standards under federal laws, and an insurer's reimbursement policies on health care are inadmissible as evidence in a medical claim; to provide that medical bills itemizing charges are inadmissible as evidence and an amount accepted as full payment for medical services is admissible as evidence of the reasonableness of the charges; to specify the manner of sending a notice of intent to file a medical claim and provide a procedure for the discovery of other potential claims within a specified period after the filing of a medical claim; to provide that any loss of a chance of recovery or survival by itself is not an injury, death, or loss for which damages may be recovered; to provide civil immunity to certain medical providers regarding the discharge of a patient with a mental condition that threatens the safety of the patient or others; to require that governmental agencies that receive peer review committee records maintain their confidentiality; and to clarify the definition of "medical claim." (CONTINUED; 1st Hearing-Sponsor)

Rep. Robert Cupp (R-Lima) described his bill as the product of months of talks with the Ohio State Medical Association and the Ohio Hospital Association. The Ohio Association for Justice, however, is "not on board" with all of the bill's provisions, he acknowledged. He said the bill would "fill in some of the gaps" in ten areas of existing medical malpractice tort law.

"An unfavorable medical liability climate can lead to expansive and expensive litigation, expensive and sometimes hard to obtain liability insurance, and a diminished supply of medical professionals to meet the needs of patients," he said. "Although the medical malpractice climate in Ohio has significantly improved in the past decade or so as a result of enactments by the General Assembly, there are several things which can further improve medical tort liability law and practice."

According to Rep. Cupp's overview, the bill would:

- Label communications from health care providers communicating error or fault to the list of inadmissible documentation.
- Reduce the need to sweep into the lawsuit unnecessary defendants.
- Permit a notice of intent to file a medical claim to be served by certified mail rather than in person.
- Abrogate the loss of chance theory of tort liability by restoring the "traditional concept of causation by abolishing the judicially-created loss of less than even chance of recovery theory of liability."
- Prevent insurance reimbursement policies from establishing a legal standard of care for medical tort liability.
- Correct existing language regarding nursing home plans of care by exempting hospitals and other providers from the language.
- Maintain the confidentiality of peer review records but clarify that they may be provided to regulators without losing confidential status.
- Prohibit the introduction of "phantom damages" into evidence.
- Provide limited immunity for certain healthcare providers or hospitals acting in good faith and in concert with professional standards when medically discharging a patient who has a mental health condition that may threaten the safety of the patient or others.
- Establish a different liability standard for medical care in the event of a widespread disaster event resulting in "widespread personal injury (or) loss of life that results from any natural or technological phenomenon or act of a human, or an epidemic."

Lawmakers raised several questions about the bill, including several focused on provisions labeling certain communications inadmissible and prohibiting the introduction of phantom damages into evidence.

Rep. Nicholas Celebrezze (D-Parma), for example, questioned whether it was within legislative purview to modify the rules of evidence. And Rep. Bill Seitz (R-Cincinnati) asked whether the phantom evidence provision might deter patients from seeking health insurance. Rep. Kristin Boggs (D-Columbus) asked who or what would determine whether a disaster qualifies under the bill. Rep. Cupp said that area of the bill could use some extra defining, although his inclination is to allow the jury to decide.

Subscribers Note: For full testimony, see the committee's website under Feb. 15.

Finance

HB 26      TRANSPORTATION BUDGET (McColley, R.) To make appropriations for programs related to transportation and public safety for the biennium beginning July 1, 2017, and ending June 30, 2019, and to provide authorization and conditions for the operation of those programs.

Health

The panel met briefly to accept the committee's rules for the new session and have members introduce themselves.

Chair Rep. Steve Huffman said the panel would not be meeting next week, and would not meet on Wednesday, April 5, the day after Gov. Kasich's State of the State address, which is scheduled to be held in Sandusky.

Finance: Agriculture, Development & Natural Resources Sub.

The panel started its budget review work with testimony from Sarah Creedon, executive director of the Liquor Control Commission. (Redbook)

"The Commission is an adjudicatory and rule-making agency that oversees Ohio's alcohol beverage industry. The agency's mission is to provide fair and impartial hearings to protect the public and the permit holders, and to ensure compliance with Ohio liquor laws and administrative rules," she said. "The agency also adopts and promulgates rules, standards, and requirements regarding alcohol sales in Ohio."

Ms. Creedon said the commission works with the Ohio Investigative Unit, the Attorney General's Office, the Division of Liquor Control, and the Department of Taxation to achieve its mission.

"The Division of Liquor Control is responsible for processing applications and issuing liquor permits. Permit holders can appeal division decisions rejecting liquor permit applications and renewals to the commission. As an adjudicatory body, the commission functions as an administrative court with the same duties and obligations of any court," she explained.

The executive budget provides LCC with $844,553 in Fiscal Year 2018, which is an 4% over estimated FY 2017 spending, and $851,269 in FY 2019, which is an increase of 1% from the prior year. Ms. Creedon said the money for commission operations comes from a portion of liquor permit fee revenue.

"While the commission receives no GRF funding, the commission does contribute to the GRF by depositing all revenue it collects from financial forfeitures issued against permit holders for violations of Ohio's liquor laws and rules," she said. "In fiscal year 2016, the commission collected over $1.2 million in financial fines and forfeitures and deposited those funds into the GRF. In the current fiscal year to date, over $1 million was collected and deposited into the GRF."

Rep. Brigid Kelly (D-Cincinnati) asked about the impact of the growing craft brew industry on the panel. Ms. Creedon said that while permit requests have increased, she hasn't seen a related uptick in cases before the commission.

She similarly told Rep. Michael O'Brien (D-Warren) that she couldn't correlate a caseload increase because of the Investigative Unit's transfer to the Highway Patrol a few years ago. Ms. Creedon told Rep. Kelly that the commission plans updates to its database and other improvements with the additional funds in the budget.

Racing Commission: Executive Director William Crawford briefed the committee on the operations of the commission, which regulates horseracing in the state. It also uses no GRF, and instead is funded through taxes on wagers, licensing fees, other fees and fines, and a small percentage of casino revenue, he said. (Redbook)

"The majority of the Racing Commission's expenditures are for subsidies to the horseracing industry in the form of additions to purses at live horse races as well as supplements to purses for Ohio horses that win races at Ohio tracks and other promotional expenses," he said. "Regulation expenses include administration expenses which also include officials and veterinarians as well as drug-testing expenses, expenses that relate to investigation, licensing and the enforcement of rules."

The commission's budget request is about $32.3 million a year over the upcoming biennium. In addition to the five commission members, RAC currently staffs eight full-time and seven part-time positions, according to the Legislative Service Commission. The agency contracts with two stewards, two judges, and five veterinarians.

Chairman Rep. Andy Thompson (R-Marietta) asked if declining casino and VLT revenue, which makes up a big chunk of the agency's budget, has impacted its finances. Mr. Crawford said it has not done so considerably.

Rep. Kelly asked about efforts to ensure safety for riders and horses.

Mr. Crawford said the inspection of racing surfaces, which the commission oversees, is the main concern in that regard and that stewards watch races to make sure they are run safely. He told Rep. O'Brien that stewards can cancel races when the temperature dips below a minus 10-degree wind chill factor or following consultation with jockeys and drivers.

Responding to the chairman, the witness said the commission spends about $1.6 million a year on its drug testing program and investigating potential cheats is "a major concern of ours."

Racing Chairman Robert Schmitz briefly addressed the committee, explaining that the bulk of Ohio's racing industry is tied to Standardbreds and that with the installment of video lottery terminals at horse racetracks, has seen a resurgence after several years of declines.

A Standardbred breeder himself, Mr. Schmitz allowed that he bred his stock outside of Ohio for many years but now there's better breeding stock and other improvements due in part to increased funding from VLTs.

He said racing's impact to the state's agricultural industry is a "very, very big business."

Sea Grant Program: Christopher Winslow, director of the Ohio Sea Grant College Program, F.T. Stone Laboratory, and the Center for Lake Erie Area Research, testified in support of the program's budget and outlined its various education, research and outreach initiatives. (Testimony)

The program receives just under $300,000 a year in state funding, which is used to leverage federal grants. (ODHE-Agriculture Redbook) The director said the program draws down about $10 from other sources for every dollar of state funding it receives.

"Historically, Ohio Sea Grant has managed 8-10 research projects annually (~$480,000). However, since April of 2015, we have increased that research portfolio dramatically. We currently have 119 projects listed within OSU's Office of Sponsored Program's research database," Mr. Winslow said in prepared testimony.

"The program is currently managing $5 million in funding from the Ohio Department of Higher Education (ODHE; $4 million in two $2 million allocations) and OSU's College of Food and Agricultural Sciences (Field to Faucet Initiative; $1 million) to address Lake Erie harmful algal blooms."

Mr. Winslow said Ohio Sea Grant and Stone Laboratory "are exceptional programs and assets to the entire state."

"We solve environmental problems (more than 50 ongoing research projects), enhance the local economy (i.e., business retention and expansion programming), inform decision-makers, and improve the quality of science education in Ohio," he continued. "I would argue that since we first received funds in 1983, we have annually demonstrated that our line item is not a cost to Ohio, but a wise investment of valuable state funds."

Chairman Thompson lauded the public involvement promoted by the program and asked about invasive species.

The director said invasive mussels are "not going anywhere," and cited gobies as another example of non-native species that have infiltrated the Great Lakes. He said researchers are keeping an eye on four species of Asian carp, as they have made it up the Mississippi River drainage area to within 30 miles south of Lake Michigan.

Responding to questions about algae bloom research, he said the main source of nutrients that cause the problem can be traced to agriculture land management practices but that researchers aren't in the "finger-pointing" business. He said the group taps funds from two endowments to finance educational workshops for farmers on best practices in that regard. Mr. Winslow also told members of the committee that he is working with donors to generate funding for equipment upgrades.

In response to a question from Rep. Scott Lipps (R-Franklin), he said buoys used for water quality research cost $50,000-80,000 apiece.

MARRIAGE CEREMONIES (Vitale, N.) To provide that an ordained or licensed minister or religious society is not required to solemnize a marriage and a religious society is not required to allow any building or property of the religious society to be used to host a marriage ceremony if the marriage does not conform to the ordained or licensed minister's or religious society's sincerely held religious beliefs, to provide that an ordained or licensed minister or religious society is not subject to civil or criminal liability for such a denial, and to provide that the state and political subdivisions may not penalize or withhold benefits to an ordained or licensed minister or religious society for such a denial. (CONTINUED-AMENDED (See separate story); 2nd Hearing-Proponent)

Subscriber's note: Full testimony is available on the committee's website under Feb.15.

Finance: State Government & Agency Review Sub.

The subcommittee began its review with the Board of Embalmers and Funeral Directors.

(Redbook)

Tim Derickson, the board's director, testified that a significant issue the agency is facing is the increasing problems with pre-need funeral services, in which a person pays in advance for the service. Cash-strapped funeral service providers sometimes use that prepaid money, which is supposed to be saved until the service is needed, to meet their bottom line.

That trend causes an increase in the number of investigations and complaints, Director Derickson said, and the board is asking for more funding to add a staff member in two years to help with those investigations.

"To help solve this problem, I think this board needs a little help from what we're currently staffed at," he said.

He also said he expected legislation to be introduced this session with support from funeral home providers for a fee on pre-need services that would help cover costs of unmet pre-need services.

Rep. Kirk Schuring (R-Canton) suggested that legislation be introduced soon so it could be incorporated into the budget document, to avoid the board having expenses budgeted without the revenue to pay for them.

Chair Rep. Keith Faber (R-Celina) also discussed moving the money the board collects in fines to the General Revenue Fund, rather than returning it to the board, to avoid the appearance of the board fining businesses to meet its budget.

"If we were to make that transfer, you're going to need some additional revenue," Rep. Faber said.

The subcommittee also reviewed the Ohio Commission on Hispanic and Latino Affairs.

(Redbook) Executive Director Lilleana Cavanaugh said the commission's increased budget needs stem mostly from insurance and operating costs.

Asked by Rep. Faber what the commission would do if it did not receive the extra $50,000 asked for in the budget, Ms. Cavanaugh said it would have to move a full-time position, one of three, to part-time.

"What is important is to know that through our commission, we're able to provide these agencies with an understanding of the Latino community, the language, the culture, thus decreasing those gaps in communication and culture," she said.

The panel also heard testimony in support of the commission from others, including Claudia de Leon, president of the Hispanic Chamber of Columbus. Ms. de Leon said the commission serves a vital role in the community.

"The Commission on Latino Affairs is a major bridge into the Hispanic community as well as a valuable resource to the Hispanic community - from creating more awareness of how our government works and the services available to help them achieve their educational or personal goals to alerting us of incoming or ongoing legislation that could have an impact to our increasing Hispanic population in Ohio," she said.

Another board reviewed by the panel was the Sanitarian Registration Board (Redbook), which Executive Secretary Stephanie Youst said registers people who are responsible for testing drinking water, inspecting restaurants and performing other public health tasks.

The board proposed an increase in fees, which Ms. Youst said would help cover the increased costs of a new licensure system, rent, supplies and other items.

Ms. Youst said the board is necessary because it ensures public health departments and others have licensed, trained and qualified staff.

"The reason that you need sanitarian registration is sanitarians are responsible for protecting public health," she said.

COMMITTEE HEARINGS

Ways & Means

SB 35 TAX CREDIT (Skindell, M.) To remove the income restriction on the earned income tax credit and to make the credit refundable beginning in 2017.

Sen. Michael Skindell (D-Lakewood) said the bill is the same as his previous effort to make the Earned Income Tax Credit refundable and remove current credit income restrictions (SB21, 131st General Assembly).

Ohio's current EITC equals about 10% of the federal EITC, he said. For those with adjusted gross incomes exceeding $20,000, the credit is capped at 50% of tax due. The legislation would remove that cap.

Sen. Skindell said reducing that cap and making the credit refundable will "go a long way in reducing Ohio's poverty rate." He added that 26 states have EITCs that are refundable.

"A state refundable EITC is targeted to help low to moderate income working individuals and families," he said. "A refundable state EITC would have a significant impact on the long term economic well-being of our low income wage earners and our local and state economy."

Sen. Peggy Lehner (R-Kettering) questioned how many Ohioans were able take advantage of the credit last tax year. She asked whether she is correct in observing that the bill would benefit those with lower incomes who would not have much of a tax liability in the first place. "Absolutely, and that's why we want to make it nonrefundable and remove those restrictions," Sen. Skindell replied, adding that a lower tax burden frees up money for clothing or other essentials for those low-income families.

Responding to further questions, Sen. Skindell said the Legislative Services Commission analysis of his bill last year indicated the total cost of the proposal would be around $180 million. In the eight legislative sessions he's been pushing for the change, he said that number has been fairly stable.

SB 36 AGRICULTURAL LAND (Hite, C.) To require that the computation of the capitalization rate for the purposes of determining CAUV of agricultural land be computed using a method that excludes appreciation and equity buildup and to stipulate that CAUV land used for a conservation practice or enrolled in a federal land retirement or conservation program for at least three years must be valued at the lowest of the values assigned on the basis of soil type.

SB 9 SALES TAX HOLIDAY (Bacon, K.) To provide for a three-day sales tax "holiday" in August 2017 during which sales of clothing and school supplies are exempt from sales and use taxes. (CONTINUED; 1st Hearing-Sponsor)

Sen. Kevin Bacon (R-Minerva Park) said his bill is the same as one he introduced last year that would institute a one-year sales tax holiday during the first weekend in August. (SB264, 131st General Assembly)

Although the sponsor said he still envisions a bill enacting a permanent annual holiday, he said he opted again for the one-time approach after it helped garner legislative and administrative support last session.

Once again the bill would create a three-day sales tax exemption on clothing items up to $75 and on school supplies costing $20 or less per item.

"Many of you may recall the first two sales tax holidays which were passed during the 131st General Assembly," he told the committee. "These events were highly advertised in every part of the state and very popular with Ohio residents. My office received letters of support from students, businesses, and educators following the first two sales tax holidays."

He again touted a study from the University of Cincinnati that determined the 2015 holiday landed the state $4.7 million in additional revenue. He said the university is once against compiling a study of the 2016 holiday that will be shared with the committee upon completion.

Chairman Sen. John Eklund (R-Chardon) said it would be "extraordinarily helpful" to receive that report by Feb. 21, although Sen. Bacon expressed doubt about that timeline. Sen. Sean O'Brien (D-Hubbard) requested the study include, if possible, a breakdown of the impact on counties bordering Pennsylvania, which has no sales tax on clothing items.

Sen. Sandra Williams (D-Cleveland) questioned why the Kasich administration has yet to endorse the sales tax holiday as an annual event.

Sen. Bacon replied that in his conversations with the administration, the governor's staff is committed to using the most conservative form of budgeting. The administration was supportive of both previous one-off holidays, he said, "and we are hoping they will be again."

Subscribers Note: For full testimony, see the committee's website under Feb. 15.

Government Oversight & Reform

SB 10 PRIMARY ELECTIONS (LaRose, F.) To expand the circumstances under which a board of elections or the secretary of state is not required to hold a primary election. (CONTINUED; 1st Hearing-Sponsor)

The bill's sponsor, Sen. Frank LaRose (R-Hudson), said it would eliminate the need for primary elections when only one candidate qualified for the ballot.

"I call this the superfluous primaries bill. This is that bill that is meant to address that rare situation where there is only one candidate on the ballot and we are forced to hold an election," he said.

The bill stems from a problem in which a special election is needed, costing taxpayers hundreds of thousands of dollars, for a race that has already been decided, he said.

"The fix to this is simple," he said. "We trigger the need for an election on how many candidates are certified for the ballot, not how many candidates file petitions for the ballot."

Sen. Edna Brown (D-Toledo) asked if it would apply if a candidate dropped out, leaving only one remaining.

"Essentially what this comes down to, if there's only one candidate left, then there's no need to hold an election," Sen. LaRose said.

SB 18 DAY DESIGNATION (Thomas, C.) To designate September 12 as "Jesse Owens Day." (CONTINUED; 1st Hearing-Sponsor)

The bill would designate Sept. 12 as Jesse Owens Day, sponsor Sen. Cecil Thomas (D-Cincinnati) said. He was inspired after seeing the movie "Race" and learning that Jesse Owens was from Ohio.

Mr. Owens, who was born in Alabama, grew up in Cleveland and attended the Ohio State University, is best known for winning a record eight NCAA championships on the track in college and winning four gold medals at the 1936 Olympics in Berlin.

"Jesse Owens is remembered as an ambassador for American ideals, both at home and abroad," Sen. Thomas said. "While his incredible athleticism is impressive on its own accord, his legacy is all the more noteworthy because of the character he showed in the face of bigotry. Recognizing Jesse Owens on his birthday - September 12 - is a fitting tribute for one of Ohio's greatest native sons."

SB 21 ELECTION PROCEDURES (Uecker, J.) To reduce the minimum number of precinct election officials in a precinct in which electronic pollbooks are used and to eliminate the requirement that a board of elections send a notice to a person's residence address when the board cancels the person's voter registration because it received a report of the person's death. (CONTINUED (See separate story); 1st Hearing-Sponsor)

SB 28 ABORTION (Uecker, J.) Regarding final disposition of fetal remains from surgical abortions. (CONTINUED (See separate story); 1st Hearing-Sponsor)

Education

SB 34 ACADEMIC YEAR (Manning, G.) To generally require public and chartered nonpublic schools to open for instruction after Labor Day. (CONTINUED (See separate story); 1st Hearing-Sponsor)

SB 8 SCHOOL TECHNOLOGY & SAFETY (Gardner, R., Terhar, L.) To require the Ohio School Facilities Commission to establish a program assisting school districts in purchasing technology and making physical alterations to improve technology infrastructure and school safety and security. (CONTINUED (See separate story); 1st Hearing-Sponsor)

Without discussion, the committee confirmed the governor's appointments of Eric Poklar, Rebecca Vasquez Skillings, Charlotte McGuire and Martha Manchester to the State Board of Education.

Volume #86, Report #31 -- Wednesday, February 15, 2017

House Passes Bills Dealing With Cocaine, Taxes, Gambling; Speaker Talks Collective Bargaining

Legislation to change how cocaine is accounted for in drug convictions passed the House unanimously Wednesday.

The House also advanced bills updating the state's tax code to align with federal changes and allowing Ohio casino employees to gamble at other casinos.

The cocaine bill (HB 4) passed unanimously after House members voted 95-1 to incorporate an emergency clause. That bill is designed to clarify the statute for how penalties for cocaine possession are assessed based on the amount of cocaine after an Ohio Supreme Court ruling interpreting the existing language, sponsor Rep. Robert Cupp (R-Lima) said. (See Gongwer Ohio Report, February 14, 2017)

The Supreme Court's decision in State v. Gonzales said the state must prove the actual weight of the cocaine included in compounds, excluding filler material, to use the amount for sentencing. Rep. Cupp said it would be costly and time-consuming for the state to invest in the laboratory equipment to prove that for these cases.

"The practical fact of the court's decision was to make every cocaine violation a fifth-degree felony unless the cocaine was pure," he said.

Rep. John Rogers (D-Mentor-on-the-Lake) said the bill, with the emergency clause, is needed now because there is currently no added penalty for trafficking in large amounts of cocaine compared to small amounts.

"As the law now stands, drug dealers and traffickers are incentivized to traffic in large quantities of cocaine," he said.

The House also voted unanimously to pass a bill (HB 11) to update the state's tax code with changes in federal law.

"As a CPA, I am well aware some of the tax laws can be a bit dull and difficult to understand, however this legislation is necessary so we can ensure Ohioans are able to fully benefit from the new federal laws this tax season," sponsor Rep. Gary Scherer (R-Circleville) said in a statement.

The other bill passed by the House (HB 32) would allow casino employees to gamble at other unaffiliated casinos in the state. Sponsor Rep. Bill Seitz (R-Cincinnati) said it simply gave casino employees the same right already given to racino employees.

"The only limitation by this bill is that you cannot be employed by or affiliated with the casino at which you are playing," Rep. Seitz said.

Speaker's Comments: Speaker Cliff Rosenberger (R-Clarksville) told reporters after session that while a number of his caucus members are supportive of recently introduced "right-to-work" legislation (HB 53), it's not a focus for leadership.

"We're always going to have members that want to introduce bills and do things. That's in their prerogative to do," he said. "We'll have conversations with the caucus, but I don't know that we have a game plan going forward."

The speaker said many in the legislature remember what happened with the last attempt at similar legislation (SB5, 129th General Assembly), which was repealed by voters. There might not be broad enough support for it, he said, though the state is facing pressure as more states implement similar policies.

"Ultimately for the state, the right-to-work pathway is one which is probably taken to the ballot," he said.

Critics Take Aim At Several Portions Of Transportation Budget

Detractors of certain aspects of Gov. John Kasich's proposed two-year transportation budget on Wednesday spoke out against tax policy changes in the bill, urged more funding for public transportation and lobbied for increased fees for deputy registrars.

Testifying before the House Finance Committee, Matthew White, general counsel of IGS Energy, and Jason Phillips, policy director for Clean Fuels Ohio, both disagreed with a portion of the budget (HB 26) that would allow for the 28-cent-per-gallon Motor Fuel Tax to be levied on compressed natural gas. (Redbook)

Mr. White told the panel that the proposal would harm the fledgling industry while generating little revenue for the state.

"It would be unwise to now impose a tax on CNG in such an expedited manner without studying how the tax may harm the industry and without looking at the complexities of the tax code to ensure any tax is applied fairly," he said in testimony.

Rep. Alicia Reece (D-Cincinnati) questioned Mr. White on if he would be open to a phased-in approach.

In response, Mr. White said a phased-in tax may be appropriate when the CNG market share grows from its current 1% to 3% or more, but not in the current budget cycle.

"We would support a broader study of CNG, including how to incentivize it and how to make it work best for the state of Ohio," he said.

Rep. Adam Miller (D-Columbus) asked how much the federal alternative fuel tax credit weighs on his opposition to the MFT being imposed on CNG. Mr. White said given the political changes in the nation's capital, he is not hopeful that the federal tax credit will be renewed.

Mr. Phillips told the panel that financial incentives should be paired with the tax if it is imposed.

"Pennsylvania and other states that currently tax CNG pair this tax with a very healthy financial incentive to offset a new tax that would hurt the ROI," he said in testimony. "Pennsylvania has had an incentive program for several years, allocating over $25 million to alternative fueled vehicle projects. It has been so successful that they have renewed the program."

Jeffrey Erb, president of the Ohio Association of Convenience Stores, raised concerns in his testimony over a proposal to change the point at which the MFT is collected. The proposed change would allow for the MFT to be collected at the refinery rack starting in 2018. Currently, the tax is paid at the wholesale level, giving business owners about a month after purchasing the motor fuel to sell it and collect taxes from customers before paying taxes to the state.

The change in the point of collection for the tax could generate as much as $92 million per year in revenue, according to the Legislative Service Commission.

Mr. Erb said the change would negatively impact small businesses.

"I asked myself who would benefit by this change. The only answer I could come up with that made sense was big oil. They will be the ones to hold the excise tax if this change is made. There certainly is no crisis in collecting the excise tax now. The Ohio Business Gateway is very efficient for reporting and collecting the tax," he said.

"I also don't see this as being particularly helpful to the government. I hope the government does not see itself as more important than the honest hard working businessmen that produce goods and services that actually allow the government to function."

Rep. Rob McColley (R-Napoleon), the bill's sponsor, said in a recent interview that amendments are likely to address both of those issues. He also said a potential change allowing deputy registrar fees to increase could be in the works. (See Gongwer Ohio Report, February 13, 2017)

Aldo Filippelli, president of the Ohio Deputy Registrars' Association, said in his testimony that a fee change is warranted given the current $3.50 level was set in 2004.

He requested the fee be boosted by $2.50 with additional increases of 50 cents in 2020 and 2021.

Rep. Robert Sprague (R-Findlay) questioned if it would be more appropriate to phase in such an increase over time.

Mr. Filippelli said that may have worked six or seven years ago, but at this point he is losing employees because of the salaries he is able to pay.

Joe Bowsher, a deputy registrar for the past two decades, said that since the last fee increase, operating costs have increased significantly.

"As an employer, I find that the wages that I pay are below other employers in my area including Wal-Mart, White Castle and most non-skilled positions. As a small business owner, it frustrates me that my employees are paid $10 per hour with little or no benefits, and the state employees in the same job are earning $6 more each hour plus benefits," he said in testimony. "For me to raise wages for my staff to the same amount as state employees would cost me over $120,000 per year, not including taxes and benefits."

Rep. Dan Ramos (D-Lorain) questioned Mr. Bowsher on the number of his employees that receive public assistance. "The state of Ohio is not saving any money if your employees are on public benefits," he said.

Mr. Bowsher said that at least one of his 13 employees receives public assistance.

Several proponents of public transportation also urged lawmakers to make additional investments in the area.

Jason Warner, manager of government affairs at the Greater Ohio Policy Center, applauded a proposal to use federal money to increase funding for public transportation by $10 million for a total of $33 million. However, he said the state could do more and suggested that an additional $17 million in federal funds be flexed for public transportation.

"Setting aside a total of $50 million in FHWA funding to public transit will result in 7.5 fewer miles of highway expansion, or 24 miles of highway repaired per year. For perspective, ODOT paved 5,564 lane miles in 2015," he said in testimony.

"Allocating $50 million per year of FHWA fund to transit-related capital investments will have negligible impact on Ohio's crucial highway maintenance and construction programs, while significantly improving safety, performance, and use of Ohio's public transportation systems."

Asked about the impact that public transportation can have on the tourism industry in a city, Mr. Warner used the example of Cleveland, which hosted the 2016 Republican National Convention, and Columbus, which lost out to Philadelphia for the Democratic National Convention. Public transportation played a major role in that, he said.

"There was no other method for them to get down to where the main convention site was going to be," he said of Columbus and the lack of transportation options from John Glenn International Airport.

Nathan Alley, transportation policy coordinator for the Ohio Chapter of the Sierra Club, echoed many of those sentiments in his testimony. He told the panel that for every $1 invested in public transit, it generates $6 in economic activity.

"We appreciate the allocation of additional flex funding to transit in this proposed budget, but even with that allocation, it is our understanding that transit would still be left with a $20 million deficit because of anticipated changes to our state sales tax structure," he said.

"Please do all that you can in this budget cycle to ensure that we achieve economic development, increase employment opportunities, reduce urban sprawl and congestion, and create more livable communities for all Ohioans."

Akshai Singh of Ohio for Transportation Equity told the panel that the state needs to invest $192.4 million in capital and $96.7 million in operating funds just to meet existing demand for public transportation services.

"Ohio needs a 21st century transportation system, made up not only of roads and highways, but also a complete network of affordable, accessible, and sustainable transportation options, including public transit, passenger and freight rail, electric buses and vehicles, and walk-able, bike-able streets. We need at least $300 million a year - to address the cost of backlogged capital needs, and start to build a system of transit alternatives for the future," he said in testimony.

Katie Frederick, executive director of the American Council of the Blind of Ohio, asked lawmakers to increase funding for public transportation from its current level of 1% to 10%.

The Cincinnati chamber applauded the $10 million increase in funding for public transportation, saying it will allow the Southwest Ohio Regional Transit Authority to replace aging and outdated vehicles.

"At the beginning of this year, SORTA had 63 buses past their 12- year useful life," the group wrote. "Every year beyond this threshold means increased operating and maintenance costs. A 15- year- old bus costs 133% more to maintain than a 10- year- old bus. As of January, Metro had 40 buses that are 15 years old or older, resulting in more than $500,000 in additional annual operating expense. This additional $10M can help unlock federal resources to more rapidly replace the outdated fleet that currently transports people throughout our region."

The group also said that it would be supportive of an amendment to increase funding to Transportation Improvement District across the state. It also noted its support for increased investment in transportation technology.

"As you review programs to pilot innovations in transportation, we look forward to working with you to identify opportunities in southwest Ohio to deploy new technology and bring our state to the fore of innovation in transportation," it wrote.

Also providing testimony was Shane Lieurance, a deputy registrar, and the Cincinnati USA Regional Chamber, the latter in written form.

Senate Committee Debates Bill On Poll Workers, Death Notifications By Election Boards

A Senate panel Wednesday questioned a bill that would reduce the minimum number of election officials needed at certain precincts and change requirements for boards of elections to notify households when deceased individuals are removed from voter rolls.

Members of the Senate Government Oversight and Reform Committee said they wanted to ensure polling places have proper supervision and that people know if they are mistakenly removed from voter rolls.

The bill (SB 21) would grant permissive authority for county boards of elections to reduce the minimum number of election officials from four to two in multi-precinct locations that use electronic poll books, sponsor Sen. Joe Uecker (R-Loveland) said.

"Electronic poll books are revolutionizing voting in precincts across Ohio," he said. "These digital tablets are currently utilized by fifty-five counties. Their use will continue to increase as more counties take advantage of enacted state funds to assist in the cost. Electronic poll books eliminate reliance on traditional paper poll books creating a better and more efficient experience for voters and poll workers."

That authority is permissive, meaning boards of elections would have the right to do so but would not be required, he said.

Sen. Edna Brown (D-Toledo) said she was worried the county board would be pressured to cut costs even if they didn't think it was the best course of action.

"My concern is that county commissioners might pressure boards of elections to make these reductions and then perhaps cause other problems," she said.

Sen. Uecker said the bill would help county boards in areas where one party is dominant and they have trouble finding enough election officials of the other party.

"I think it makes a more proper as well as a more efficient election process," he said.

Sen. Brown suggested the bill require it to be a bipartisan decision by the board of elections to reduce the number of election officials required, and the sponsor said he'd be open to exploring possible amendments.

Sen. Frank LaRose (R-Hudson) said he was worried that having fewer election officials could mean there would be times when only officials from one party were working.

"When there's only two, my worry would be that during the normal ebb and flow of the day as people take a lunch break, a bathroom break, that you have bipartisan oversight," he said.

The bill would also remove a requirement that a board of election send notice to a person's address when the board cancels a voter registration because it received a report of his or her death. Families have complained to boards of elections, Sen. Uecker said, about the emotional toll of receiving such notices.

Sen. LaRose said he was concerned that removing the requirement could lead to voters accidentally being removed from the rolls and not finding out until they go to vote. He said that recently happened to a Legislative Service Commission staffer.

"The idea was that just like any other change in voting status, there would be a notification sent to the household," he said.

Sen. Michael Skindell (D-Lakewood) said stopping the notifications could lead to some people being unable to vote. That outweighs the concerns of families who are upset by receiving the notification, he said.

"Causing cancellation is the greater harm," he said.

Sen. Brown said she would like to hear more from county boards of elections about how they receive death notifications.

Sen. Uecker said he would be open to whatever the committee decides to do with the provision, but asked that members keep an open mind and hear testimony from local election officials.

Dating Protection Order Bill Eyed For Quick Committee Approval

A priority House bill to permit domestic partners to obtain civil protection orders appears poised for quick committee passage, according to the committee's chairman.

The measure (HB 1) would close a loophole that sponsor Rep. Emilia Sykes (D-Akron) said "leaves thousands of Ohioans without recourse in the event of dating violence."

After a first hearing Wednesday featuring emotional testimony from domestic violence survivors and advocates, House Civil Justice Committee Chairman Rep. Jim Butler (R-Oakwood) said the bill should move quickly.

"We'll probably have it for a possible vote next week," he said.

That's good news for Rep. Sykes and other advocates who were disheartened when the bill which had been on the verge of passing fizzled out during the lame duck session when the Senate declined to take a concurrence vote.

In that case, the language from Rep. Sykes and former Rep. Christie Kuhns was amended into a separate bill on the House floor during the final night of session. The Senate then opted not to move the bill, saying the amendment was too "complicated" to pass at the zero hour. (See Gongwer Ohio Report, December 9, 2016)

Now the bill is back with the support of Republican House leadership and with Rep. Nathan Manning (R-N. Ridgeville) stepping in as lead co-sponsor in place of former Rep. Kuhns.

In her testimony, Rep. Sykes said abuse victims who don't meet the statutory definition of domestic violence have too little recourse to protect themselves and their children.

"House Bill 1 is necessary because Ohio currently defines domestic violence as violent acts occurring between spouses, family members, those cohabiting, living as spouses, or individuals who share a child in common," Rep. Sykes said. "People in ongoing, substantial, intimate, and dating relationships are not included."

Rep. Manning emphasized the bill would not create an additional class of protection order. Rather, it would fold domestic partners into those eligible to apply for existing orders.

"Due to the risk of ongoing violence in these situations, it is important that all victims of abuse have resources to protect themselves," Rep. Manning said. "Many people argue that a piece of paper is not going to protect someone from harm, but studies have shown that violence stops completely or is significantly reduced when a protection order is in place."

Others testifying in support included representatives from the Summit County Victim Assistance Program, Northeast Ohio Medical University and its police department, and Cleveland Clinic Akron General along with a Summit County Juvenile Court judge.

But perhaps the most powerful testimony came from a pair of domestic violence survivors who described in detail their experience.

Victoria Morgan described having her own protection order request rejected only to see her attacker later force his way into her home and kick her twice down a staircase.

"A lot of times, people only think about the physical signs of abuse," she said. "But the emotional is so much worse. Going through counseling, putting my children through counseling. ... I urge you to pass this bill. It's needed."

Liv Out Loud Founder and CEO Diona Clark recounted her experience in which she ended a relationship, and then her ex-boyfriend arrived at her new home with a gun, trapping her inside.

"After about an hour, he finally let up from the door and I went to reach for the doorknob and he shot me twice at point blank range, once in the chest and once in the wrist," she said.

"My life was spared, but another life could be lost due to lack of proper protection and services to turn to," she continued. "HB 1 can provide adequate help for individuals in need. I am determined to fight for individuals who are victimized; therefore I am determined to fight for HB 1."

Opponents Of 'Pastor Protection Act' Warn Of LGBT Discrimination, But Speaker Expresses Support

Speaker Cliff Rosenberger indicated support Wednesday for a controversial bill on same-sex marriage, which a couple hours later was the target of intense criticism from several clergy members and other opponents.

Similar legislation (HB286, 131st General Assembly) was introduced in the last legislative session but never cleared committee.

However, Speaker Rosenberger (R-Clarksville) said after session the bill (HB 36) is a priority for many House Republicans, and that it would reaffirm protections already enshrined in the Ohio Constitution.

"We have a lot of people in the caucus interested to see something happen with this," he told reporters.

The speaker said his caucus is going to talk more about the bill next week.

"The state constitution already provides for a lot of protections and I think what we'll be doing is passing a bill that just reaffirms that," he said.

Prior to Wednesday's committee testimony, which focused on opponents, Rep. Nino Vitale (R-Urbana) amended the bill with language he said would clarify that it does not invalidate other rights of clergy members.

Afterward, a Democratic lawmaker, nearly a dozen pastors and others denounced the controversial measure, which would codify that no licensed minister or religious organization is required to perform or host a marriage ceremony that does not conform to their religious beliefs.

Delivering testimony to the panel, Rep. Nickie Antonio said the so-called Pastor Protection Act is unnecessary, offensive to members of Ohio's LGBT community and has the potential to damage the state economically.

The Lakewood Democrat said in testimony that both federal and state law provide religious freedom protections that prevent ministers and religious institutions from being forced to take part in wedding ceremonies with which they disagree. She likened the legislation to a controversial North Carolina law that prevented local governments from implementing anti-discrimination laws and forced transgendered individuals to use the restroom of their birth gender.

"If we codify discrimination in Ohio through this bill, we could open the floodgates to confusion and the public's overall disgust with discriminatory legislation," she said. "We need look no further than North Carolina to know that bills that would codify discrimination, don't sell. In North Carolina, PayPal cancelled 400 jobs, Bruce Springsteen canceled his concert, the NBA pulled the All-Star Game, and the NCAA moved its championship games out of state, costing millions, if not billions in lost revenue and payroll."

Rep. Antonio instead suggested that lawmakers move legislation that would ban LGBT discrimination in employment and housing.

"No matter how this debate goes forward I believe it is important for us to remember that we may disagree and discern another person or group to be wrong-but when that discernment causes us to value another person or group less, then we've crossed the line into judgment, condemnation, and exclusion," she said. "I am hopeful we will not cross that line. I respect the members of the clergy who have concerns my hope is that we will experience mutual respect for the dignity and worth of all couples including same sex couples."

Rep. Janine Boyd (D-Cleveland Hts.) asked Rep. Antonio, the first openly gay member of the Ohio legislature, if she and her married partner considered having their wedding ceremony in a place of worship that is not open to non-traditional marriage.

"We went to the place that we knew would embrace us, that would celebrate us," Rep. Antonio replied.

Rep. Michael Sheehy (D-Oregon) asked if she is aware of any lawsuits filed due to a member of the clergy's failure to solemnize a marriage. Rep. Antonio said she is not aware of any such litigation. Even so, she said the bill would not prevent such a lawsuit from being filed.

"With or without this law, anyone in Ohio has the ability to file a lawsuit if they feel they have been wronged," she said.

Rev. Virginia Lohmann Bauman, senior pastor of St. John's United Church of Christ in Columbus, called the legislation "a thinly veiled attempt to legitimize bigotry" and drew a comparison with the U.S. Supreme Court case of Loving v. Virginia, in which the high court struck down laws banning interracial marriage.

"And yet for decades after that case was decided, and in fact, even today, racist pastors in their own churches refuse to marry, with impunity, inter-racial couples they deem unfit to be married in their church," she said in her testimony. "And that right to officiate, or not, in the pastor's own house of worship, is constitutionally protected by our federal and state constitutions. Interestingly, at no time after the Loving decision did the Ohio legislature find it necessary to 'protect' pastors from being 'forced' to marry inter-racial couples outside of that pastor's faith beliefs."

Rep. Niraj Antani (R-Miamisburg) took issue with the characterization that the legislation is an attempt to "legitimize bigotry" and questioned Ms. Lohmann Bauman on how she could be so certain that there is no need for the measure.

"There is no precedent for this. How can you say this is redundant?" he asked.

Ms. Lohmann Bauman responded by saying that it is not the job of the legislature to legislate "hypothetical fears" and said that U.S. Supreme Court Justice Anthony Kennedy in the Obgerfell decision legalizing same-sex marriage made clear that it would not interfere with religious protections provided by the First Amendment.

Rep. Ron Hood (R-Ashville) questioned whether Ms. Lohmann Bauman was characterizing those members of the clergy who support the measure as bigots. (See Gongwer Ohio Report, February 8, 2017)

"I do believe they are asking the legislature to do something inappropriate," she said, adding that the question would be best answered by each of the members of the clergy supporting the legislation.

Rep. Stephanie Howse (D-Cleveland) asked Ms. Lohmann Bauman if she is aware of any lawsuits filed against a member of the clergy that has refused to conduct a marriage ceremony for any reason.

"There are none that I'm aware of," she said.

Ms. Lohmann Bauman was among 11 members of the clergy that submitted testimony in opposition to the bill.

Rev. Joseph M. Cherry of the Unitarian Universalist Society of Cleveland raised the specter that the legislation could pave the way to allow civil servants to discriminate against members of the LGBT community.

"Civil servants must fulfill the law or face the consequences," he said in his testimony. "They are not subject to exception based upon their faith, religion or tradition. If they do not wish to perform all of the duties that their civil position requires, they are free to seek other employment. No one is conscripted into civil service."

Rev. J. Bennett Guess of the United Church of Christ, who said he refused to sign marriage licenses for the 11-year period in which the ban against same-sex marriage was enshrined in the state constitution, called the bill "a solution in search of a non-existent problem."

"'Bogus' is the only word I have for it," he said in prepared testimony. "While purportedly designed to protect clergy and places of worship from performing or hosting marriages against their wishes, it is unnecessary and a complete waste of taxpayers' time and money."

Opposition testimony, however, was not confined to members of the cloth and Rep. Antonio. Alana Jochum of Equality Ohio told the panel that the legislation gives wide latitude to undefined "religious societies."

"Religious entities play many roles in our state. Catholic Charities and Salvation Army, for example, provide a host of social services, crisis intervention, temporary housing, after school programs, and even food assistance. Many receive state and federal funding to do so, and are obligated to serve everybody equally in these programs," she said in prepared testimony. "Religious entities, therefore, are not always simply 'houses of worship;' they also include entities that engage in commerce -- by operating conference centers, reception halls, engaging in equipment rental, and much more."

Lisa Wurm, policy manager for the ACLU of Ohio, said her organization would defend the freedom of religion if clergy members were required to conduct marriages that violate their religious tenets.

"At the same time, we will not allow the guise of religious freedom to harm others," she said in prepared testimony. "This is what it means when religious liberty turns from acting as a shield to a sword. We've rejected the sword approach during the civil rights era, when religion was used as a reason to refuse integration in businesses and in our public areas. We need to continue to reject it now."

Senate Resumes Debate Over Disposal Of Fetal Remains

Legislation dealing with the disposition of fetal remains from abortions had its first hearing in a Senate committee Wednesday, with some members voicing concerns that it would face legal challenges.

The bill (SB 284) is similar to one introduced last session (SB254, 131st General Assembly) as part of a flurry of legislation that followed an investigation by Attorney General Mike DeWine into the disposal of remains.

The measure's sponsor, Sen. Joe Uecker (R-Loveland), told the Senate Government Oversight and Reform Committee the bill is designed to ensure the proper disposal of remains.

"Last year it was brought to my attention that the Ohio Revised Code does not contain procedures regarding the disposal of aborted infant remains," he said. "In fact, most states lack such policies."

The bill declares that an abortion facility can only dispose of aborted remains through cremation or interment and grants the mother the right to determine the final disposition of remains, Sen. Uecker said. It would also require the Department of Health to maintain records of the woman's decision and the final disposition.

Sen. Kenny Yuko (D-Richmond Hts.), the ranking Democrat on the panel, said similar legislation in Indiana and Texas has been challenged and overturned in courts, and he was worried it was setting the state up for expensive legal issues.

He also said there didn't appear to be any real reason for the bill, as investigations have not turned up a pattern of problems with the disposal of remains.

"I know as legislators, we get contacted by people asking us to look at possible legislation and here's the reason why," he said. "I just can't think of the reason why in this case."

Sen. Uecker said the state should take steps to ensure fetal remains are respected.

"I believe that the right to life is the very first right we have, possibly the most important right we have," he said. "I believe that the way society shows this is crucial."

He also said he believed there were differences between his bill and the legislation in Texas and Indiana, and that it would be more likely to withstand judicial scrutiny.

Sen. Frank LaRose (R-Hudson) asked if the bill would apply to all fetal remains or just those from surgical abortions. The sponsor said it would only apply to the remains from surgical abortions.

Sen. Michael Skindell (D-Lakewood) asked if it was appropriate for the state to single out one kind of fetal remains.

"What state interest is being served by the unequal treatment of just surgical fetuses versus any other fetal death?" he asked.

Chairman Sen. Bill Coley (R-Liberty Twp.) said he and the committee will take a serious look at vetting all of the legal implications of the bill with the hopes of avoiding burdening the state with lawsuits.

Senate Advances Measure Creating Perry County Municipal Court

Once again, the Senate unanimously passed legislation to establish a county municipal court in Perry County.

The latest 33-0 vote, during a session Wednesday, marked the third time the chamber has approved the bill. In the most recent instance, the bill cleared the Senate, only to be held up in a House committee during the 2016 lame duck session. (SB 299, 131st General Assembly)

"This will be the third time this body has voted on this and it's my hope the House can act expeditiously on it and we can secure timely order of justice for the citizens of Perry County," sponsor Sen. Jay Hottinger (R-Newark) told colleagues on the Senate floor.

In addition to creating the court, the bill (SB 25) authorizes one full-time judgeship and provides for the nomination of that judge by petition. Upon its effect, the bill would abolish the existing Perry County Court and designate the county's clerk of courts as the clerk of the newly formed court.

Supporters - including the Ohio Supreme Court - say the court is needed after New Lexington eliminated its mayor's court in 2013, a cost-saving move that increased the caseload of other county courts from 1,800 cases a year to between 5,000-6,000 cases a year.

The bill contains an emergency clause, which was accepted by a 33-0 vote. That provision was necessitated, Sen. Hottinger said, by a committee amendment requested by the Ohio Supreme Court.

Added earlier this week, the amendment allows members of the Criminal Justice Recodification Committee to continue serving after they're no longer officeholders.

The Senate also unanimously passed a resolution (SCR 4) that permits the Senate President and House Speaker to appoint individuals to write arguments for and against proposed constitutional amendments.

Similar provisions have been passed unanimously each session since 1974, said sponsor Sen. Bob Peterson (R-Sabina).

Obhof Gaggle: Speaking to reporters after session, Senate President Larry Obhof (R-Medina) said he anticipates the chamber will act quickly on approving the governor's request for a joint session April 4 in Sandusky for the State of the State address. (See Gongwer Ohio Report, February 13, 2017)

Formal resolutions to convene the joint session had not been introduced by lawmakers in either chamber as of Wednesday afternoon.

"I think it's a great opportunity to showcase some of our natural resources, particularly the lake," he said. "I've spoken with (Sen. Randy) Gardner several times about possible activities up there and I think this will give us a chance to focus on some of the water quality efforts we've done over the last few years and maybe some that are coming up and to highlight Ohio's tremendous tourism industry."

He said the Senate could hold two or three committee meetings on site in Sandusky, although no firm plans have been made.

Asked about the recent introduction of a House right-to-work bill (HB 53), Sen. Obhof said the issue isn't a priority for Senate leadership.

"As with any piece of legislation, we'll give thoughtful consideration to anything that comes to our chamber," he said. "I would say you'd have to speak to the individual caucus members but we have done significant reforms in recent years.

"I'm not aware of anybody in the Senate that plans to introduce a bill about that subject but there are 33 members and I haven't called the other 32 to see where everybody is on what bills everyone's introducing. I don't micromanage like that," he continued.

Bill To Start School After Labor Day Will Get Thorough Review, Lehner Says

It is unlikely that watchers of a bill that would move the first day of school to after Labor Day will know soon whether it has the Senate Education Committee's support.

Chairwoman Sen. Peggy Lehner (R-Kettering) said she's planning for long discussions on the bill (SB 34) as well as another to create a funding program for school technology infrastructure upgrades (SB 8).

"I think both of the ones that were in (committee) today are going to require a fair amount of hearings," she said.

The panel will also extensively review anticipated legislation on end-of-course exams and student suspensions in addition to a recently referred bill (SB 39) addressing questions about e-school attendance tracking, she said.

The school start date measure, sponsored by Sen. Gayle Manning (R-N. Ridgeville), has generated considerable buzz among school districts and parents since it was first unveiled late in the last General Assembly.

Waiting to open schools until after Labor Day would alleviate issues caused by a lack of air conditioning or functioning windows in schools when it is hot, as well as give families more time to vacation, Sen. Manning said.

"This additional vacation time for families also helps to promote economic activity," she said. "This can create and maintain jobs, providing additional local tax revenues that support our schools and local public safety resources."

Sen. Manning stressed that the bill shouldn't interfere with local control because it has an opt-out provision allowing school boards to continue setting the start dates of their choosing. Boards would be required to hold a public hearing before voting to opt out.

The change from calculating the school year in days to hours would also make it possible for districts to maintain their current end dates while pushing back the start date, she added.

While tourism industry leaders are expected to once again testify in support of the measure that they say will benefit the state's economy, it's likely many school districts won't be in favor.

Sen. Lehner said after the meeting that she's "open to" starting school in September because other states already require it without issue. However, she acknowledged there could be logistical problems and that public hearings on the issue have the potential to cause rifts between schools and parents.

"At what point does it become an opt out versus a, 'Hell no we won't go,'" she questioned.

Regardless of concerns and the inability of the proposal to pass through previous legislatures, the chairwoman at the end of Wednesday's discussion promised Sen. Manning that the bill will continue to be seriously considered.

The committee also heard sponsor testimony on a bill to allow schools that are low on the School Facilities Commission's priority funding list to receive dollars now for technology and safety upgrades. A companion measure (HB 37) started its journey through the House Education and Career Readiness Committee on Tuesday. (See Gongwer Ohio Report, February 14, 2017)

Joint sponsor Sen. Randy Gardner (R-Bowling Green) said he'll be pushing to move the bill through the upper chamber before spring break.

"This was a recommendation in Senate Bill 3 (in the 130th General Assembly), but this amps this issue up another notch to do something that we believe can be very meaningful for schools and school children around the state," he said of the bill that would require the School Facilities Commission to create a technology infrastructure funding program as opposed to current law that permits it.

Sen. Gardner told committee members that the two-page bill would give OSFC the ability to structure the program in the way it deems best after receiving input from stakeholders.

Despite his optimism that the bill will be reported out of committee in the next few weeks, Sen. Lehner said it will likely require multiple hearings and stakeholder meetings to continue "ironing out some of the questions."

She suggested that the sponsors consider whether charter schools would be eligible for the funding and Sen. Vernon Sykes (D-Akron) raised questions about if and how district priority would be determined.

Victim's Rights Group Announces Campaign Kickoff

Law enforcement officials and advocates on Wednesday announced the official kickoff of a statewide campaign to enshrine new requirements for the treatment of crime victims into the Ohio Constitution.

Supporters of the so-called Marsy's Law, named after a murder victim who died in 1983 and patterned after similar laws in other states, appeared at a Statehouse news conference and urged support for the changes, which if the coalition is successful would appear on the Nov. 7 ballot.

The Marsy's Law for Ohio amendment would mandate that crime victims: Receive notification of all legal proceedings; are provided the opportunity to be heard during the various steps of the process, such as parole hearings; are allowed to give input on plea deals; and are provided restitution resulting from the financial impact of the crime.

"By placing guarantees into the Ohio Constitution that a victim's rights will be protected, Marsy's Law for Ohio will be another important tool for prosecutors in the battle to help crime victims," longtime Franklin County Prosecutor Ron O'Brien said in a statement.

While the state's constitution already includes some protections for crime victims, supporters of the amendment say they don't go far enough.

"The rights of crime victims are too important to be allowed to fall through the cracks in the criminal justice system," Franklin County Sheriff Dallas Baldwin said. "I have long believed that the rights of crime victims should be respected just as much as the rights of the accused. Marsy's Law for Ohio is a much-needed change to Ohio's constitution."

Also appearing at Wednesday's event were representatives of crime victim advocacy groups and survivors of violent crimes.

"My rights as a victim in the domestic violence case against my husband were routinely violated and no one in the system seemed to care," crime victim Danielle Morlan said. "Marsy's Law for Ohio will change that and give crime victims the ability to protect and enforce their rights."

The campaign committee was cleared to begin collecting signatures last week when the Ohio Ballot Board agreed the proposal constituted a single issue. (See Gongwer Ohio Report, February 8, 2017)

Supporters have until July 5 to gather 305,591 valid signatures and meet other requirements to qualify for the fall ballot.

Lawmaker: CAUV Formula A 'Major Butt-Kicker' For Farmers

Sen. Cliff Hite (R-Findlay) on Wednesday renewed his effort to overhaul the Current Agricultural Use Value tax formula in testimony before the Senate Ways & Means Committee.

The proposal he outlined (SB 36) is identical to his prior bill on the subject (SB246, 131st General Assembly), he said. But he's hoping this year's bill will fare better than the last, which received six hearings in the Senate but failed to advance beyond committee.

"I understand the angst. I'm sure the Department of Taxation is going to pull their hair out," Sen. Hite said. "We've been thinking about this and talking about this for a long time. It's time to do something. It's time to give relief to these farmers."

Farmer groups for their part have already vowed to "carry the CAUV fairness fight into 2017." They say the formula that has worked fine for decades has become skewed and is driving up their tax burdens, threatening to force them out of the profession. (See Gongwer Ohio Report, December 20, 2016)

Opponents, including statewide school groups, have previously opposed the change out of concerns it will negatively impact school funding.

Predicting that those concerns will return before the committee in testimony this session, Sen. Hite urged lawmakers to put themselves in the position of farmers.

"If any of you were doing your taxes this time of year and you discovered your taxes were going to go up 300% you would freak out, especially if you're on a fixed income, especially if you're a brand new, let's say, farmer trying to get started," he said."

The bill would prohibit the use of certain nonagricultural factors in the valuation of farmland, which the sponsor said would improve the accuracy of the formula.

"Including these assumptions has no bearing upon the land's capability to produce agricultural income, which is the sole purpose of the CAUV formula," he said. "These factors arbitrarily inflate the value of farmland based on market considerations and do not in any way account for how much income is achieved."

The bill would also remove disincentives to engage in conservation practices, which he said undermines the formula's original intent to preserve land.

"If I don't have an incentive to keep my woodlands, I'm going to plow them down and make more money," Sen. Hite said. Although that is currently happening, he said, it's not yet occurring on a large scale.

He acknowledged that the taxation percentage for some farmers is currently going down, but asked lawmakers to keep that in perspective.

"To me going from (a) 350% (increase) to 310% is going down but, in layman Coach Hite language, it's a major butt-kicker anyway," he said. "It's not even apples and oranges. It's like apples and squirrels."

In response to questions, Sen. Hite committed to providing specific numbers on several aspects of the issue to senators moving forward. Among the unanswered questions was how the CAUV applies to urban farmers.

Sen. Hite did express support for an idea from Sen. Louis Terhar (R-Cincinnati) to implement a "collar" on the formula so that the taxes owed in any one year could not rise above or drop below specific levels.

"But there's a caveat," Sen. Hite replied. "The formula from the '70s has the capacity to also go down and so if you change that formula the chances of going way down would be eliminated with the (collar). I don't know what is better."

Sen. Peggy Lehner (R-Kettering) requested more detail on woodland preservation regarding the CAUV. Sen. Hite replied that the woodland in question is typically small and serves as a wind or snow buffer. Under the current formula, however, farmers stand to gain money from clearing that land to free up new farmland, he said.

Sen. Bob Hackett (R-London) agreed that something must be done. He criticized a time lag present in the formula in which farms going through tough times are still paying taxes for healthy years from 2012 and 2013. Meanwhile, he said, the industry is struggling with historically low interest rates and simultaneously high crop prices.

"We just have to update the rules and make them fit the times," Sen. Hackett said.

Sen. Bob Peterson (R-Sabina) agreed the historically low capitalization rates have "skewed the formula" and forced land values to be higher than they should be.

Predicting a robust discussion on the issue as the bill moves forward, Sen. Hite requested committee members keep in mind the importance agriculture plays in Ohio's economy. Potential farmers are being deterred from entering the profession, he said.

"We can't allow that to happen when it's our number one industry in the state of Ohio," he said. "This is a change to make sure we preserve that."

Insurers, Regulators Eyeing DC For Health Policy Changes

State insurance regulators and the health insurance industry are closely monitoring the federal debate over the future of the Affordable Care Act to determine the impact that changes could have on Ohio consumers and the marketplace, stakeholders told a House panel on Wednesday.

Jillian Froment, deputy director of the Ohio Department of Insurance, and Miranda Motter, president and CEO of the Ohio Association of Health Plans, both said changes could have a far-reaching impact on the Ohio market.

Ms. Froment told the House Insurance Committee that the full impact of any federal changes won't be known until a final product is in place.

She said, however, that insurers will be filing their 2018 rates and policies within the next two months. "We are incredibly concerned about what this looks like for Ohio," she said.

Ms. Froment noted that those filings will be based on current law. If there are changes, ODI will have to be flexible to accommodate for adjustments.

"At this point, they're looking for clarity," she said of insurers. "And that's what the department's looking for."

Ms. Motter said federal changes could either bring stability or volatility to insurance markets.

The federal law, she said, did little to address health care costs, and said efforts should be made to identify key cost drivers - including medical service rates and prescription costs. Further, she said OAHP wants to increase transparency so Ohioans have more information about the cost of the medical services they are obtaining.

Other key cost-related issues, she said, are state and federal mandates, taxes and fees.

ODI: In an introductory presentation, Ms. Froment told the panel the agency regulates insurers and agents across Ohio, and is pleased that Ohio is home to a robust insurance industry. The agency's goal is to assure consumer protection while promoting a stable and competitive environment.

She said Ohio is the sixth-largest state by premium volume, and represents the world's 17th-largest insurance market.

She told Rep. Michael Henne (R-Clayton) that the use of data analytics is at the center of the rate-setting process. Rates, she said, need to be tied to the risk of loss or expense.

Rep. Andy Brenner (R-Powell) asked how the department will be reviewing auto insurance rates with the expected increase in the use of automated vehicles.

Ms. Froment said that will be a big issue in the future, adding the agency expects the industry to come to an agreement the same way insurance issues were addressed with ride-sharing services like Uber.

Discussions on that front are ongoing with large auto insurers, she said. "We're seeing them come to the table with some really good ideas."

OAHP: Ms. Motter said her members want to promote quality care and affordable coverage.

She said 52% of Ohioans receive their coverage through employer-sponsored plans, and a majority of those employer plans are self-insured. That means local business leaders are often the ones determining the scope of coverage for the majority of Ohioans.

A key issue for insurers is the cost of health services, Ms. Motter said. "If health care is expensive, health insurance is expensive," she said.

Ms. Motter also said lawmakers can take another step to address Ohio's opioid problem by limiting the availability of medication that can be addictive. She said OAHP backs federal recommendations to reduce the number of pills that are issued to treat certain conditions.

She also told Rep. Wes Retherford (R-Middletown) that the group opposes budget language that would eliminate transparency reforms that were included in the previous budget bill.

Rep. John Bocchieri (D-Alliance) raised questions about the importance of having health insurance coverage be portable, given new research indicating that many young people will change jobs many times over their lives. Ms. Motter said that is an issue that can be discussed among member plans.

OII, AOLIC: Dean Fadel of the Ohio Insurance Institute and Greg Lestini, representing the Association of Ohio Life Insurance Companies, also briefed the committee on the role and scope of their members' industries.

Mr. Fadel said there are 972 property and casualty companies licensed to do business in Ohio, and strong competition helps keep the state's average rates well below national averages.

The state's average auto insurance rate is the 12th lowest, while the average homeowner's insurance rate is 30% less than the national average, he said.

He said the industry is a key economic driver, accounting for a significant number of employees and economic activity.

Mr. Fadel said the industry is pleased that a number of educational institutions have added insurance-related programs and certificates, saying that training is important to the industry's future in Ohio.

Mr. Lestini also said Ohio is fortunate to have some of the lowest-cost life insurance options available.

He said 40 life insurers are domiciled in the state, and all insurers have six million policies valued at $960 billion in place. Life insurance companies also make other contributions to the state by investing in mortgages and owning property, he said.

Mr. Lestini said Ohio is known as a stable state in terms of regulation, and it is important that the premium tax the industry pays is preserved. He also cautioned lawmakers against imposing new taxes on out-of-state insurers, saying the threat of retaliatory taxes could create issues for Ohio companies that sell policies elsewhere.

Subscribers Note: The presentations are available on the committee's website under Feb. 15.

Survey Shows Restaurant Owners Optimistic; Cedar Fair Has Record Fiscal Year; Diebold, DDR Report Financials

Restaurant owners and operators entered the new year with optimism after a strong finish to 2016, according to Ohio Restaurant Association survey results.

Restaurateurs in the state told ORA that they're planning for a 4% same-store sales increase in 2017 after experiencing an average 3% sales increase across the industry last year.

"The Ohio restaurant scene is dynamic with growth opportunities for concepts with outstanding brand positioning, great food, A+ guest service and flexible models that offer many customer touch points such as mobile ordering and delivery," ORA President and CEO John Barker said in a statement.

"Same-stores sales in Ohio during the fourth quarter were positive for our industry, up more than 3% as we experienced mild weather and strong traffic around the holidays," he added. "Growth slowed in January, but owners are bullish about the year due to strong consumer confidence and a soaring stock market."

About 80 restaurateurs throughout the state with an average of 2.5 restaurants and revenue per company of about $5.7 million replied to the survey, which also asked about food delivery utilization, food delivery impact, off-premise occasions, and food and labor cost outlooks.

Cedar Fair: The Sandusky-based theme park company continued to break records in 2016, ending the year with $1.29 billion in revenues.

It reported the revenues, which were up 4% from 2015, along with net income, that came in at $178 million, or $3.14 per diluted limited partner unit.

The increases go hand-in-hand with others, including a 3% jump in attendance to 25.1 million guests last year, the company said. Average in-park spending also increased 2% to a record $46.90 per guest.

Out-of-park spending also hit record numbers, coming in at $146 million - a 6% increase from 2015. Cedar fair attributed those revenues in part to higher occupancy rates and average daily room rates at the company's resort properties.

"We credit this achievement to our unique regional brands and the positive responses we have received for our special events programming and immersive entertainment offerings," CEO Matt Ouimet said. "These individual park brands allow us to provide our guests an experience unmatched by other generic amusement parks. This in turn has resulted in strong guest loyalty within the regions we operate and decades of record growth across all revenue channels."

Based on the year-end earnings report, the company said it's confident it will achieve its long-term growth goal of $500 million in Adjusted EBITDA by the end of 2017, which is a year earlier than planned.

Diebold Nixdorf: The company reported fourth-quarter revenue of $1.2 billion - an increase of nearly 104% over last year as a result of the acquisition of Wincor Nixdorf.

Full-year revenue also increased 37.1% to $3.3 billion compared to 2015, the company said. It cautioned, however, that comparisons to previous periods are materially affected by the August acquisition.

DDR: The Beachwood company posted fourth quarter net income attributable to common shareholders of $28.1 million, or $0.08 per diluted share

For its full fiscal year ended Dec. 31, it reported net income of $37.6 million, or $0.10 per diluted share. That's an improvement over last year, when it saw a net loss of $94.5 million, or $0.27 per diluted share.

I will soon be introducing Private Sector Right to Work legislation. Our neighboring states of Michigan, Kentucky, West Virginia, and Indiana have passed Right to Work, and it is long overdue here in Ohio.

This important bill will help make Ohio businesses more competitive and prosperous by eliminating forced union dues and memberships. No one should be forced to pay a union to get or keep a job.

If you are interested in co-sponsoring please contact my legislative aide Josh Miller at 614-644-6886 or Josh.Miller@ohiohouse.gov by the close of business on March 3rd.

RE: Co-Sponsor Request: Exempt State Employees Pay Portion of Dental, Vision, and Life Insurance Premiums

I will be introducing legislation that requires exempt state employees to pay a portion of their dental, vision, and life insurance premiums. Exempt state employees currently pay 15% of their premium for medical insurance – while paying 0% of the premium for dental, vision, and life insurance coverage. This legislation requires exempt state employees pay the same percentage for dental, vision, and life coverage as they pay for their medical insurance premium.

Key Facts:

- By having exempt state employees pay 15% of their dental, vision, and life premiums, taxpayers would save at least $2.6 million annually.
- Legislation would impact about 16,400 exempt state employees.
- Legislation directs the state to seek the same provision when negotiating collective bargaining agreements that cover about 35,900 unionized state employees, which would save taxpayers an additional $4.7 million annually.

If you would like to co-sponsor this legislation or have any questions, please contact my Legislative Aide, Blake Springhetti, at Blake.Springhetti@ohiohouse.gov or at (614) 466-1731 by Tuesday, March 28 at 5:00 P.M.

Hi Speaker Rosenberger,

My name is Lacey White and I am the Policy Coordinator for the American Legislative Exchange Council. I was given your contact information by Lisa Nelson in regards to the Legislative Staff Fellowship that ALEC will be conducting at our Annual Meeting and States and Nation Policy Summit this year. I believe Lisa spoke to you about staff recommendations from your office, and we would be more than happy to have members of your team (up to 2 for each meeting, ideally) join us at our meetings this year. I have included a little more information on the program below and also attached the application to this email.

The program consists of a series of online educational sessions and a three-day, intensive program of training and networking with legislative staff members from around the country. Attendees can expect to hear from ALEC policy directors, experts and scholars on a number of different policy issues and discuss the ideas presented with fellow participants. The purpose of the training is to promote holistic development (philosophical, policy and professional) of attendees and help them to promote the ideals of free markets and limited government throughout their careers as legislative staffers.

The fellowship includes the cost of hotel stay, meals and registration for the meeting, and allows for up to $500.00 in travel reimbursements after the meeting.

We currently have open enrollment for ALEC's Annual Meeting as well as our States and Nation Policy Summit for 2017.

Please let me know if you or your staffers have any further questions, and feel free to share this opportunity with any legislative staffers you know that may be interested!

Best,
Lacey

RE: Co-Sponsor Request: Exempt State Employees Pay Portion of Dental, Vision, and Life
Insurance Premiums

I will be introducing legislation that requires exempt state employees to pay a portion of their dental, vision, and life insurance premiums. Exempt state employees currently pay 15% of their premium for medical insurance – while paying 0% of the premium for dental, vision, and life insurance coverage. This legislation requires exempt state employees pay the same percentage for dental, vision, and life coverage as they pay for their medical insurance premium.

Key Facts:

- By having exempt state employees pay 15% of their dental, vision, and life premiums, taxpayers would save at least $2.6 million annually.
- Legislation would impact about 16,400 exempt state employees.
- Legislation directs the state to seek the same provision when negotiating collective bargaining agreements that cover about 35,900 unionized state employees, which would save taxpayers an additional $4.7 million annually.

If you would like to co-sponsor this legislation or have any questions, please contact my Legislative Aide, Blake Springhetti, at Blake.Springhetti@ohiohouse.gov or at (614) 466-1731 by Tuesday, March 28 at 5:00 P.M.

Re: 2017 ALEC Spring Task Force Summit

As many of you already know, the American Legislative Exchange Council is America's largest nonpartisan, voluntary membership organization of state legislators dedicated to the principles of limited government, free markets and federalism. Comprised of nearly one-quarter of the country's state legislators and stakeholders from across the policy spectrum, ALEC members represent more than 60 million Americans and provide jobs to more than 30 million people in the United States.

On May 5, 2017, ALEC will be hosting their Spring Task Force Summit, located in Charlotte, North Carolina. This one-day summit will give participants the opportunity to collaborate with legislative leaders from across the country on some of the following issues:

- Civil Justice

- Commerce, Insurance and Economic Development
- Communications and Technology
- Criminal Justice Reform
- Education and Workforce Development
- Energy, Environment and Agriculture
- Health and Human Services
- Tax and Fiscal Policy

I can personally attest to the benefit of working with leaders from across our great country to find solutions to common issues. If you are interested in joining ALEC and participating in the 2017 Spring Task Force Summit, I encourage you to visit their website at <https://www.alec.org/>.

If you have any questions or concerns, please do not hesitate to reach out to me or to Tyler Yapple in my office at Tyler.Yapple@ohiohouse.gov or 614-466-7959.
